

Kobusch-Sengewald wins over more and more customers

Increasing turnover with Poly-clip film

Warburg/Halle(Westphalia), 16 January 2007. Packaging film specialist Kobusch-Sengewald is reporting visibly increasing sales in the chemical-technical field for its Poly-clip film. More and more new customers, like the latest ones from Italy, are helping to continuously increase sales figures. The film is used mainly in the chemical-technical market segment to package industrial adhesives, silicones and other sealants.

“For about the past two years, the turnover made with this film has continually increased,” explains Jürgen Vaupel, non-food sales manager at Kobusch-Sengewald. The product is a multi-layer foil laminate with product-specific barrier properties, which prevent the additives and other aggressive contents of the products from diffusing. The films are usually processed into tubular bags on Poly-clip packaging machines. The films are subject to intense demands on their operational properties, being very robust while also having good processing properties.

One long-standing customer is Bostik (www.bostik.de), a leading manufacturer of adhesives and sealants for professional use in the building sector. At Bostik, Kobusch-Sengewald packaging films’ good price/performance ratio is valued along with the knowledge that the company has the technical know-how to develop product-specific packaging solutions. Last but not least, the extensive service provided plays an important role in order to be able to react flexibly to changes.

Kobusch-Sengewald is an international manufacturer and processor of flexible packaging films as well as a supplier of special packaging solutions for foodstuff, chemical-technical and hygiene products and medical items. More than 500 staff are employed at the two sites in Warburg and Halle/Westphalia. Kobusch-Sengewald generates a turnover of around 120 million Euros.
